Attorney Hyomin Pak is a member of the Global Risk Management & Strategy Center, specializing in international trade and economic law, export controls and economic sanctions, international regulations, ESG, climate change, supply chain risks, and public international law. She actively advises major Korean corporations and the government on various issues arising from the changing global landscape.

Attorney Hyomin Pak has accumulated solid practical experience providing legal counsel and handling litigation across a broad spectrum of areas, including international trade, international investment, export controls, economic sanctions, climate change, economic cooperation, and administrative litigation at major government ministries in the Republic of Korea. Building on this foundation, she provides comprehensive solutions encompassing legal, policy, and strategic aspects in fields such as international trade and investment, economic security, export controls, economic sanctions, overseas regulations, and ESG and supply chain management. She serves as a trusted partner in these uncertain times, working closely with clients including global corporations, governments, public enterprises, and financial institutions to address the diverse global and transnational risks they face. She also advises domestic companies on regulatory challenges related to exports and overseas investments, such as supply chain issues, export controls, and financial sanctions, and assists in the establishment and management of compliance systems.
